

HISTORY SUMMER SCHOOL

Five days of challenging and insightful History for students aged 15-18. Covering a range of historical periods and approaches, this course offers a realistic and enjoyable taste of seminar style undergraduate level study.

“The History Summer School pushed us budding historians further than normal school study could, helping us to develop not just our historical knowledge, but also inviting us to question more how we think about history. I found the tutors friendly, with a vast knowledge of their subject and the other people on the course open and easy to talk to.”

“It gave me a good idea as to what history at university will be like, and of study in small tutorial groups. The material covered, particularly that of historiography, gave me a good grounding in current historical debate. It will certainly help me at interview and in the writing of my personal statement.”
